Kloss, C. Borden. In the Andamans and Nicobars. The Narrative of a Cruise in the Schooner "Terrapin" with notices of the Islands, their Fauna, Ethnology, Etc.. London: John Murray, 1903.

Pp. 373

Yale: Ema 701

[This source contains little accurate ethnographic information, being mostly concerned with zoology. The ethnographic material was compiled mostly from other writers. The author himself states, "I cannot but regard the illustrations, which are a selection from my series of photographs, as the most valuable part of this work, ----". Much of the data incorporated is on the Nicobar Islands. --Analyst]

Mouat, Frederic J. Adventures and Researches among the Andaman Islanders. London: Hurst and Blackett, 1863.

Pp. 367

Yale: Ema 857

[This source was not processed because it contains little or no information not covered in later and more accurate accounts of the Andamans. Its chief value lies in the fact that it describes the Andamanese before any appreciable amount of contact with whites had occurred. A short appendix on the zoology of the Andamans by Edward Blyth was prepared after a settlement of convicts had been established by the British, so its value as a pre-contact document is less than the book itself. -- Analyst]